Welcome to Entrepreneurship Law!

Entrepreneurs learn quickly that there are many legal issues they must face in setting up and running a new business, establishing a nonprofit organization, bringing a product to market, or financing the venture.

Whether you are an inventor, a business owner, a lawyer, a CPA, a teacher, or just an interested member of the public, this website is the place to go for up-to-date and helpful information and materials. These include links to the most comprehensive on-line resources along with fully-indexed abstracts of articles (some simple and some scholarly) dealing with entrepreneurship law.

The information being made available does not constitute legal advice, which is the application of legal principles to a specific individual or situation. Information appearing on this website and on other sites and articles to which links are provided is not a substitute for and does not replace the advice or representation of a licensed attorney.

Check this out! If you are teaching students about entrepreneurship and are looking for ways to develop your program, register for a free account now to gain access to the latest instructional documents developed by scholars like yourself.

To coincide with the one year anniversary of the official announcement of the eLaw website, the Kauffman Foundation is pleased to announce the release of the first eLaw Newsletter. The newsletter tracks upcoming events, recent publications, and features topical short essays in the field of entrepreneurship law. This issue of the newsletter highlights multidisciplinary collaborations at law schools and community engagement in law school clinics across the country. View the April 2010 Edition.

Entrepreneurship Law (eLaw) is a Web site devoted to expanding entrepreneurship curriculum and education. The public portion of the Web site contains current information for lawyers, CPAs, scientists, and the general public regarding legal issues in entrepreneurship. Within the private contents of the Web site are the latest instructional materials for scholars teaching courses in entrepreneurship.

Members of the private community are also subscribed to the eLaw Listserv, a resource for facilitating interaction and discussion on the most recent entrepreneurship-related education topics.

Subscriptions to the private materials and eLaw Listserv can be made at Entrepreneurship.org/elaw.

The eLaw Web site is a subsidiary of Entrepreneurship.org, a site by the Kauffman Foundation and the U.S. Commerce Department's International Trade Administration.
